

New Book

London in Maps: a changing perspective

Seppe Cassettari, Chris Going, Fiona Cocks, Nikki Jones

London
Mapping
Festival

2011 - 2012

Key Points

- Includes a collection of full colour, highly illustrated maps
- Brings a new and changing perspective to mapping
- Published to support the London Mapping Festival

Contents:

- Introduction;
- Mapping modern London;
- Everything is mapped;
- Travelling around;
- London as a port;
- The third dimension;
- The making of maps;
- Changing styles;
- A different perspective;
- History through maps;
- Contributors;
- Map Index

London in Maps: a changing perspective, published for the London Mapping Festival (LMF), is a compelling collection of maps illustrating the diverse ways in which the capital has been mapped and portrayed both today and in the past.

This hardback offers a fascinating insight into the different ways in which we understand the geography of London through informative maps, decorative sketches and stunning photography.

It is an A4, coffee table style publication with descriptions of each of its 68 illustrations accompanied by some general text. It is 200 pages of full colour, highly detailed maps, charts and cartograms, artists' impressions as well as aerial and satellite images ranging from the modern day back to the 17th century.

This book will prove irresistible for anyone with a discerning interest in mapping and in this extraordinary and complex city.

Order online at www.londonmappingfestival.org

December 2011	68 colour illustrations
Hardback	200 pages
ISBN: 978-0-9545270-2-0	£29.99 (+ £5 p&p)

Contributions on all book sales go to
LMF's chosen charity, Map Action

Please visit
www.londonmappingfestival.org
for sample pages and online purchase

The GeolInformation Group
Telford House
Cow Lane, Fulbourn
Cambridge CB21 5HB
E: admin@londonmappingfestival.org
W: www.londonmappingfestival.org